APPENDIX 1 Dragon Puppet

K O R E A

KOREAN DRAGON PUPPET

Long ago, Koreans believed the blue dragon would protect them from the east. (The white tiger was said to protect Korea from the west.) This is why the blue dragon is on the east side of many of Korea's 7,000 temples! Dragons are make believe, of course, but you can turn a brown paper bag into a blue dragon in no time at all!

MATERIALS

Blue construction paper, about 5" x 7"
Construction paper, 2" square, any other color
Brown paper lunch bag
Cotton balls, 2
Markers, blue and black
Pencil, glue, scissors

- 1 Draw the spine, crown, teeth, and tongue on the blue construction paper. Cut out. Cut a triangle out of another color paper for the nose.
- 2 Color the whole bag blue.
- 3 Glue the crown, teeth, and tongue on the bottom part of the paper bag that will be the head, as shown. Glue on the cotton ball eyes and the triangle nose. Add two large nose dots with a black marker.
- 4 Fold the straight edge of the spine over about $\frac{1}{2}$ ". Glue this folded part to the middle back of the bag. Lift up the spine so that the points stand up.
- 5 Draw scales on the front and back of the dragon with black marker. Then, draw the four claws on each foot on the bottom front.
- 6 Slip your hand into the puppet and wave your fingers up and down to move the head.

Draw and cut out pieces from blue construction paper
